As the pathways to Australian citizenship and longer UK work visas become more accessible, the potential loss of skills and talent has never been more real. Australia is only part of New Zealand's ongoing battle to improve its 'net migration' stats, which are having a crippling impact on the country's labour market.

Net migration loss to Australia has more than doubled in recent years. Migrant arrivals have increased by over a quarter this year, but remain well below pre-Covid levels.
